ABSTRACT

This is where you describe the content of the article. This description should be clear and concise. The abstract should not exceed 150 words in length. The list of keywords should have 4 to 8 keywords. More abstract text.

1 Introduction

If you are new to LaTeX or are having difficulty modifying a previously made document to fit this document class, you may use this file as a template from which to re-build your manuscript. Please note that the initial submission requires two versions of the paper: (1) a version containing the authors' names, affiliations, and correspondence email and (2) an anonymous version. For the anonymous version, the following commands with their arguments can simply be commented out: \author, \institution, \correspondence, and \authorheading. When anonymizing the paper, also comment out any identifying information that might appear within the paper (e.g., in an "Acknowledgments" section). If the paper is accepted, this information will need to be put in the proper place; do not forget to add it all back in when/if the paper is accepted.

At the end, the bibliography appears. No standard is set for reference formatting, but do be consistent with whichever style you pick. If you use BibTeX, be sure to include the .bib file when you upload your final manuscript.

2 Another Section

Sectioning commands work just as they do in the article document class.

2.1 A Subsection

If you followed how sectioning commands work, then you might have guessed how to get a subsection.

2.2 Another Subsection

In fact, this document class was built using the article document class. Hopefully, if you started with that document class or something analogous to it, converting to this document class is not too difficult.
